RECENT WORKS

DANTE MARIONI's the son of American studio glass pioneer Paul Marioni. Dante Marioni was raised in a family of artists that includes two well-known uncles, painter Joseph Marioni and conceptual artist Tom Marioni. Dante Marioni burst onto the international glass scene at the age of 19 with a signature style that has been described as the purest of classical forms executed in glass by an American glassblower. His amphoras, vases, and ewers are derived from Greek and Etruscan prototypes, yet they are imaginatively and sometimes whimsically reinterpreted. His impossibly elongated, sinuous shapes are made with bright and saturated contrasting colors. Marioni's sophisticated glass objects evoke the rich tradition of classical Mediterranean pottery and bronzes, and of Marioni's training in centuries-old Venetian glassblowing techniques with some of the greatest masters in contemporary glass.
